Men today are facing a new world that challenge what a man is. In order to find harmony in our life, we need to rethink who we are—the old model becoming obsolete. We need to face our internal conflicts that tear us apart and find a better footing in these challenging times and define for ourselves who we want to be, and reclaim our wholeness.

This workshop explores various aspects of our experience and how it has impacted us in our work, in our relationships with others, and ourselves.

Using action methods inspired by the latest healing knowledge, we invite you to join us in this men's group. Together, we will increase the strengths within ourselves, transform our defenses, and cultivate growth through experiential therapy, psychodrama, and the creative arts.

In examining the roles within ourselves, we can discern which ones contribute to us being the best men we can be, while also adding new roles to expand beyond the limits of our current selves. This workshop is experiential in nature, providing men with a safe place for personal work.
